History of James Walker Memorial Hospital

A year or two before the death of James Walker he conferred with his physician, Dr. W. J. Bellamy and with other friends in reference to his desire to establish a public park as a gift to the City of Wilmington, but he was induced to supply a still greater local need, that of a public hospital. The erection of this building employed his waning powers until it was nearly finished, and when the summons for his departure came, he entrusted its completion to his two friends, James Sprunt and William Gilchrist.

James Walker, stonemason, contractor and builder, a native of Douglas, Lanarkshire, Scotland, donated and erected this building with the understanding that its management would never enter into politics, that no member of the Board of Managers could be appointed from either the City or County government and that the City and County would guarantee to appropriate at all times sufficient funds to provide adequately for the care of the indigent sick. Today the trend of the Board of Managers is to have a member from each religious denomination.

The institution is intended for the treatment of acute disorders, not chronic and incurable diseases. (It is necessary to draw the line between a hospital, on the one hand, and such institutions as the county home, on the other.) Mr. Walker's intention was to care for persons receiving the benefits of the former and not the latter. Both pay patients and charity cases are admitted. Any regular physician residing in New Hanover County may treat a pay case in the hospital. The resident physicians and internes act as assistants in these cases. Charity cases are admitted upon permit from the County Superintendent of Health who may be sure that the patient is a resident of New Hanover County, in indigent circumstances, not afflicted with a chronic disease or one that is incurable or infectious. Treatment of all charity cases is in the hands of the resident physician, with the assistance of the internes and the hospital is under the control of the resident physician.

From the date of its opening, June, 1901, to the present time the laudable benefaction has increased in importance until its benign influence, under its wise and beneficent directors, has extended with the increasing of the population of Wilmington to a degree not dreamed of by its original founder.

That original building completely furnished for 50 patients still stands and is a part of the hospital. Dr. Thomas R. Little was the first Superintendent. Additions have been made to this building as the years have passed. Mr. W. H. Sprunt saw and realized the necessity of caring for the colored people in this City and County, and as a donation built a separate building for the care of these patients. This contained a ward with 35 beds and a dispensary on the first floor, and until 1921 the second floor was used for the nurses' quarters. While it was not the intention of the hospital to receive patients with infectious diseases, such cases have to be cared for in certain instances, so Mr. Sam Bear, Jr., donated a separate building for these patients as a memorial to his brother in 1915. The third addition to the hospital was made by a generous benefaction of Mr. and Mrs. James Sprunt in 1917, who built as a memorial to their only daughter, Marian, an annex devoted to the care of maternity patients and children. This annex bears the name of Marian Sprunt. A new wing was added to the hospital in 1937, which increased the capacity of the beds to 188.

In 1943 the Federal Government aided James Walker Memorial Hospital in the construction of an additional building, of which the proposed cost was $508,000. The administrative offices were moved to this new building, 120 patients may be cared for, making James Walker Memorial Hospital a 300 bed hospital, exclusive of basinettes. In the basement of the building is a separate dispensary for the treatment of white and colored patients, a modern, well performance of autopsies. In 1948 the second floor of the new building was converted into a maternity division, including a delivery suite, nursery, milk laboratory ward and private rooms. The first floor of Marian Sprunt, the former maternity division was made into a polio ward. It was this same year that the physical therapy department was added and in 1949 the cancer clinic was installed across the hall from physio in the basement of the new building.

In memory of Dr. A. D. McClure, of St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, the city of Wilmington donated $100,000 to build a modern nurses' home to accommodate 50 nurses in 1921. It was necessary for the home to be enlarged in 1926, 1937, and 1943. Each nurse living in the home has the privilege of a private room equipped with a closet, lavatory and necessary furniture. The nurses' home now accommodates 166, including staff nurses, general duty nurses, and the student nurses.

A two-story, fire-proof, brick service building was completed in June, 1946. This building was built with the assistance of the Federal Government. A modern, electrically equipped kitchen, and a cafeteria type dining room for nurses and staff, occupy the second floor. The dining room for colored help and the dietary storeroom is located in the rear of the building of the first floor, behind a women's ward.

A charter was granted the James Walker Memorial Hospital on February 5, 1903 to organize and maintain a school for nurses. The first Superintendent was Miss Lilly Heller (Mrs. Thomas R. Little) of Greensboro, N. C., and the first graduating class was composed of Miss Florence Hayes of Wilmington, and Miss Alberta Robinson of Dunn. The James Walker Memorial Nursing School is an accredited number one school, and is one of the largest nursing schools in North Carolina.

Class Poem . . .

We're just plain happy to be here at last,
At the end of three years that have passed,
They've all been filled with joys and sorrows,
They are our yesterdays and our tomorrows.

We've learned the game of give and take,
Learned to build and not to break,
We've climbed the ladder toward success,
And found that we could pass the test.

Of course we never will be rich,
But we will fill a special niche,
And make others happy as we are,
Look up and smile—we're going far.

Class History

On the third of September 1947, we thirteen hopefuls presented ourselves to James Walker Memorial School of Nursing; young, naive, and cherishing a deep and secret hope for something special to come of these three years of training.

Oh! dear! Did I say thirteen of us? It seems a few of our classmates fell by the wayside for there are only nine of us now.

We embarked on our first days with an eager and feverish determination to work hard so as to become good nurses. The first weeks and months were pretty hard. With work and study and adaptation to new surroundings, we were grateful to hear that familiar "Lights Out."

Finally the great day came when we were to go to the halls and begin work with the patients. I'm sure that none of us ever felt quite so stupid and awkward as we did that memorable morning when we were confronted with our first patient to bathe. That was an ordeal which took most of us a couple of hours to accomplish. However, we finally became accustomed to the ways of a hospital and grew adapt to caring for helpless people.

Then came the white caps—that symbol of dignity that every nurse cherishes. This was the signal that we had really been accepted in this school of nursing.

The narrow black bands which made us Juniors came next. We chose our class officers this year. Dr. Walker and Misses Ashworth and Whitfield honored us by accepting the position of class sponsors. We had many wonderful social events which we will long remember.

Then came the wide black bands which made us seniors. With it came new responsibility that we shouldered with glad hearts and we knew that our goal was nearly reached.

Our three years here have been grand. Full of work and good fun. We want to thank each and everyone for his part in helping us through the years. We would never have made it without your wise and guiding hand.

Because we have high hopes for the future, we shall leave James Walker Memorial School of Nursing joyfully; but because we have gotten here memories never to be forgotten nor quite replaced by the new, we shall leave regretfully.

DOROTHY CONWAY
Class Historian

Last Will and Testament

We, the members of the class of 1950 of James Walker Memorial School of Nursing, being of sound body and comparatively sound mind, do hereby, without duress, individually and collectively will and bequeath, without reservation, our meager possessions to our heirs and assigns in this prescribed manner and form:

First: To the Doctors our sincere thanks for their kind understanding and untiring patience through these past three years.

Second: To Miss Masten and Miss Britt our deep appreciation for so capably guiding us through our years of training.

Third: To Miss Yount, our benefactor, we leave our gratitude for the innumerable deeds, actions, advice, etc., for which we shall always be indebted.

Fourth: To our instructors and supervisors go our deepest appreciation for laying a strong foundation for our future life in the nursing profession.

Fifth: To the House Mothers our apologies for our noisy jam sessions and inconveniences we have caused.

Sixth: As individuals it is our wish to bequeath the following possessions to those not as fortunate, or perhaps unfortunate, as we:

I, Ruth Wolfe, do will and bequeath my most undeserved title as the Biggest Flirt to Dorothy Trott to hold, bequeath, or otherwise dispose of as she sees fit; and my trials and tribulations while trying to keep order, as president, during class meetings to Marie Moore.

I, Rebecca Ruth Lanier, leave my love of Ford trucks and jeeps to Jeannine Andrews; those famous dungarees to Joyce Philoman; and with regrets, I will my devotion to Delivery Suite duty to Helen Daniels.

I, Edna Walker, leave my luck with 11-7 duty to Alice Rivenbark and Annie Fussell; my persistent assignments to Ward B, I cheerfully bequeath to Rachel Bloodworth; and two inches of my height to Virginia Sego.

I, Blanche Burriss, leave this book (at last) to all the students of James Walker Memorial School of Nursing, hoping it will always help them remember three wonderful years; and I sorrowfully leave my love for Surgery to Ruby Butler and Polly Moore.

I, Hilda Covil, leave a few months duty on Lower Hall A to Doris Schmidt and Mary Ellen Blalock, hoping that among their patients they will find happiness as I did. Luck to you girls!

I, Dorothy Conway, leave, over my dead body, a fraternity pin, and portrait, and a stack of letters to Arden Blake and Marvaneen Ward.

I, Enid Atkinson, leave my faithfulness to one man to Hermine Dosher; my interest in Saturday Evening Post to Juanita George; while my desire for quiet in the Nurses' Home I wish to will to Wilma Singletary.

I, Helen Bradham, leave my quiet ways to Bunny Holland—she may need them eventually; and my letter writing ability to Dorothy Murphy and Enis Chadwick.

I, Caryway Merritt, will my glasses, freckles, and pressed orchids to Mikki Winborne, Glorius Jacobs, and Loraine Galloway, respectively, who might get along just as well without them.

We, collectively as the Class of 1950, leave to James Walker Memorial School of Nursing our promise to spread her fame, to live up to her ideals and teaching, and keep her memory in mind wherever we go.

In witness whereof, the Class of '50 do hereunto set our hand and affix our seal.

Class Prophecy

By Madame Zara

TIME: 1950

PLACE: Famous Club

OCCASION: Last social before graduation

GUEST: Madame Zara—to prophecy our future

Gather around classmates and listen to what is going to happen to us when we leave dear old J.W.M.H. Madame Zara knows all, sees all, tells all.

Now everyone be still—no moving about. Draw the shades—that's right—now everyone place their right hand on the table. Quiet now. Oh! yes—here come the visions.

First, Miss Edna Walker—Here she comes slowly in white. Just a minute until I can see her more clearly. Yes! She's wearing a white uniform, she's leaving a ward—the sign over the door reads "Delivery Suite." She seems satisfied.

Now here is Miss Caryway Merritt—There's a worried and puzzled look on her face. Just where she wants to go is her problem. Will it be Chicago or New York? Seems that she's leaning more toward the sunny south. Could it be the climate? Well—maybe.

Let's see who's next. A little more time please—Well, if it isn't a short blonde. As she gets closer, I can see it is Miss Ruth Lanier. She's still thinking strongly of joining the Public Health Service. But wait a minute—she hasn't fully decided. Now, there's a beach in view. It looks similar to Kure's Beach. It is Kure Beach. Can she know someone there that she'd like to be visiting?

Here comes another young lady into view. She's a little taller and as she approaches, I recognize her. It's Miss Blanche Burriss and she's smiling very happily. The reason—a certain doctor in O.R. asked her to be his special scrub nurse. Not everyone has their greatest ambition realized.

Let's watch now—sh—you have to be more quiet. That's better—wait a little while—here comes someone else into view. Well, if it isn't Miss Hilda Covil. She's still trying to solve her transportation problem. No, hold it—I can clearly see a car in her future. Those driving lessons were really worthwhile.

Well, this next vision holds more than one person. As they approach, I can see that it is Miss Enid Atkinson and her one and only. Could they be going or have they already been to a certain church? Of course—they have completed preparations. And what could be more appropriate—she's going to return to duty on U.H.A. You know, that's where it all began.

Sit tight everybody, the locale is changing. My heavens—we're in Lynn, Mass. I'll look around and see who I know. Well—she looks familiar—if it isn't Miss Helen Bradham or should I say Mrs. Pomakis? She looks very happy, but seems to be in a hurry. I knew something was amiss—she's late getting home from the hospital to get a certain fellow an evening meal.

Here we go again—can you imagine arriving in Stillwater, Okla., in such a short time? Isn't that Miss Dorothy Conway entering that college? Wonder if she's going to study further. Wait a minute—well, it just goes to show you, marriage and a career do mix.

Have I missed anyone? Yes—I see her now. Let's look in on Miss Ruth Wolfe and see what she's doing. There she is basking in the sun on her day off. As usual, she isn't alone—that tall, lanky fellow is with her. She'd better watch that tan, after all she is doing general duty.

Well, young nurses, if you have heard all you wish to know, I—Madame Zara will take my leave. Business is calling elsewhere. Farewell.
